Story

Ritualist by Justin Penner takes inspiration from high-contrast wedge serif designs, like the 19th century typeface De Vinne, but viewed through a macabre lens. This seriously fascinating design is defined by its infinitely sharp points, and some dangerous curves that accelerate like the edge of a blade.

Occupying a surreptitious space between light and dark, beauty and morbidity, Ritualist is elegant, alluring, vaguely exotic, and um, don't look now but it might just be suspiciously watching from across the street.

The Ritualist family comprises 18 styles (9 weights plus italics), and has a Variable version. The expansive set of over 1,000 glyphs in the typeface makes it usable in hundreds of languages around the world, including full Vietnamese support, and support for languages that have local style preferences like Polish, Catalan, Marshallese, Romanian, Sami, and numerous African languages. The glyph repertoire also includes many IPA characters, thus enabling support for many indigenous languages in North America and elsewhere.

Use Ritualist as your new secret weapon when the creative brief requires your designs to give vibes of intrigue, darker desires, and mystical encounters. Set it large for arresting headlines and titles that dominate while preserving the mood with middle range of weights for subheads and brief bits of copy. A word of caution though: careful, you might become obsessed with Ritualist — or so we hope. ;)
