THREE LAWS OF ROBOTICS

I.

A robot may not injure a human being or, through inaction, allow a human being to come to harm.

II.

A robot must obey any orders given to it by human beings, except where such orders would conflict with the First Law.

II.

A robot must protect its own existence as long as such protection does not conflict with the First or Second Law.

Story

The square-ish form and slightly rounded terminals of Quara takes its cues from futuristic technology. The reduction of strokes near joins was one of several design decisions to evoke techniques used in the development of glyphs for the purpose of Optical Character Recognition (OCR) by early computers. For the design of Quara, this simplification of form is as much an aesthetic feature as it is evidence of the increasing acceptance of “unconventional” letterforms in the ongoing evolution in the construction of visual language.

The compactness of Quara makes it quite useful for display work as headlines, subheads, and in short passages of text on websites, in games, magazines, brochures, and posters.
