Story

Stenciletta by Joachim Müller-Lancé is a monolinear typeface with bridges (the little gaps) placed where thinner lines would otherwise be. Evoking an air of mechanical engineering, cargo shipping, and construction, the distinctive slanted bridges of Stenciletta are parallel to the downstrokes, which lends an interesting, consistent texture – like diagonal caution stripes.

Embracing the endearing aesthetic of having been created by engineers, like many early signage alphabets were, Stenciletta is constructed strictly from circles and straights in a limited set of angles on a square grid, without overshoot.

The Stenciletta family includes Regular and Bold weights with two-color and solid versions of both weights (8 fonts total).
